A DOUBLE MURDER IN NEW YORK .- A party of three young men from Esopus, Ulster Co., N. Y., two brothers and their friend, took a sail in an ice boat on the river, a day or two since. On arriving opposite Port Ewen they fastened the boat to the dock and went into a tavern to drink. While there three Irishman, residing in Port Ewen, took possession of the boat and salled around. One of the brothers, scaing them in the middle of the river, went to them and ordered them out. Angry words unued, when the young man seized the tiller and threatened to drive them out, when one of the Irishmen drew a snife and stabbed him in the breast, inflicting a mortal wound. The whole was witnessed from the shore by the remaining brother and his friend, when both rushed to the assistance of the injured man. On arriving where he lay, they found him inrushed to the assistance of the injured man. On arriving where he lay, they found him insensible, when they rushed upon the Irishmen, swearing vengeance. He was alive at last accounts, but his recovery is despaired of. The remaining one then went to the tavern, and obtaining a pistol, returned to the boat and shot one of the Irishmen, instantly killing him. He then started for Rondout, pursued by the two remaining comrades; but he recohed that village in advance of his pursuers, and instantly gave himself up to the authorities.

The BREEFIT OF LORRITHE AT A "FIRST PERFORMANCE."—Young Dumas, according to a Paris letter, especially inspects the lorettee to whom seats have been given, exclaiming:
"Look ye now, have ye warmly applauded?
Have ye lustily olapped?" "Oh! yes, yes, Monsieur Marschal," sing out in chorus the lorettes. "Show me your gloves!" says he.
If they can't show apilt gloves he gives them
a severe homily, and they run great risk of being black-balled when the next new plece is given. A good many lorettes are always to be seen at M. Dumas's "first performances," partly because they are seen at every such spectsale, for they have such powerful "protectors" they go averywhere. There is another reason: M. Dumas holds that the true way to make the "first performances" successful is to filthe theater with as many sensitive,
nervous people as possible, for an impression is more easily made upon them. Hence he gives as many seats away to sensitive, nervous
women as he can find women of this sort.

New York, February 18—The steamer Arabia, with Liverpool dates to the 4th inst., sin of Queenstown, arrived here this morn-

The most important portion of the proceedings of the English Parliament of the 2d and 3d inst. has been published, vis: The refusal of Lord John Russell to lay before the House the correspondence touching Savoy, and the defeat of the Government on a minor question. Lord John Russell defended the British Contact Tangiers from the charge of having sul at Tangiers from the charge of having aided the Moors, and stated that he had pur-aided the Moors, and stated that he had pursued a strictly neutral policy.

In response to the inquiry, Lord John Russell said the Government had no reason to suppose that warlike preparations were going forward on an extraordinary scale in France. The Government had earnestly endeavored to prevent a renewal of hostilities, now that the Congress was not likely to meet, and had received the most satisfactory assurances. The ratification of the new commercial treaty would be exchanged at Paris on the 4th.

London, February 4.—The Morning Post, which has the credit of being the organ of Lord Palmerston, has a conspicuous editorial upon the policy of England and France on the Italian question. It says: "We announced at the beginning of the year that a virtual alliance had been effected between England and France for the settlement of Italian affairs. We expressly stated that the two Governments bound themselves by no treaties, but their agreement was the result of the force of circumstances and the dictation of public opinion. This alliance, every day drawn closer, cunstances and the dictation of public opinion. This alliance, every day drawn closer, already begins to produce evident and tangible consequences. It is now formally determined that no intervention shall take place in Italy and the people shall be left to their own devices. It is therefore agreed that the States of Central Italy shall dispose of themselves. Fresh elections are to be held, and the Assemblies resulting from the popular choice are to decree the annexation of their constituents to the Sardinian Kingdom. The French troops are to be withdrawn from North Italy and from Rome at an early opportunity. It is no secret that Austria, having regard to the Western alliance and her own serious difficulties, has given up all hopes of rotrieving her position and influence in Italy, and not only sheaths her sword, but puts it aside. An attempt will be made to induce her to grant reforms in Venetia, of which she is still left mistress."

The Italian question, then, being likely to take still larger proportions, our best, safest and most beneficial policy is that of a strict line of duty, by which at this time last year we might have prevented war, and by which we may now guarantee the peace of Europe. That line is, "No foreign intervention, but Italy for the Italians."

THE CUSTORY OF "LITTE ELLA" AGAIN IN DISPUTE.—Mrs. Martha Burns has been for six weeks past, with her adopted daughter, "Little Ella," the precedent child, about whose custedy so much noise was made here a short time ago, in the Oily of Philadelphis, where the little one has given frequent readings in the parlors of the best society of the town. Of course, she made hosts of friends, and was about leaving for this city, full of henors and substantial rewards, but on Monday last, Mrs. Burns was astonished at heing served with a writ of habeas corpus, Issued by Judge Lowrey, of the Supreme Court, upon the petition of a man by the name of Brewster, to whom the child's father, at Cincinnati, has issued a power of attorney, authorising him to assume control over her in his stead.

Appended to this petition was the affidavit of Mrs. E. F. Ellett, of this city. This lady states, in her affidavit, that her motives are purely of a disinterested nature; that she wishes the child to be in possession of her natural gaardian. The writ of habeas corpus called for the instant production of the prodigy in Court, whereat Mrs. Burns was, of course, much distressed, but prominent Philadelphia ditizens at once stopped forward to her aid, and Mr. Childs, of Childs & Peterson, together with her attorney, Mr. Furman Sheppard, became security for her appearance with the child on Friday of this week.—N. F. Tribune, 10th. Government relating thereto. Two of the journals of Turin state that they see no harm in the annexation of Savoy to France.

From Washington.

New York, February 18.—The Herald's Washington correspondent says: At the inauguration, Colonel Shutt's first regiment, Major Warner's battalion of Baltimore City Guards, a troop of Maryland dragoous, the companies of this district, and, if possible, the United States Artillery from Fort Monroe will be present. Commanders of Knights Templars, from Richmond, Baltimere and this city, under the emitent Grand Commander French, will encort the Freemasons, who have invited the lodge at Fredericksburg, where Washington took his degrees; the lodge at Alexandria, where he presided, and the lodge at Georgetown, which aided him in laying the corner-stone of the Capitol.

Mr. Hatch, of Buffalo, who is engaged in preparing a report in regard to the reciprocity treaty, with a view to its modification and amendment, has nearly completed his labors, and is here in consultation with the State Department in regard to that subject. There are a large number of leading New York Democrats here, some of whom are delegates to the Charleston Convention from the Wood and Syracuse Convention. They are respectively casting about as to the chances of their admission into the Charleston Convention.

The Southern Senators and members are very cautious in committing themselves in favor of either. An Immense Essenter Catacome.—An immense catacomb can be seen at Rothwell in the interior of England, near the direct route from Liverpool to London. It is an immense vault built of masonry, under a church which dates back apparently for its first erection to about the year 1150, and contains the akeletons of thirteen thousand men, probably warriors, of great size, piled up in regular order, so that skulls and large bones only appear on the outsides of the piles. The skulls slow marks of spear and hatchet, but no gun-shot wounds, and their owners probably fell in mortal conflict anterior to the invention of gunpowder. The vault was discovered by accident one hundred and sixty years age, and has no connection with the church as far as known; in fact, the mystery is that there is no historical evidence nor traditionary legend which throws any light upon the obscurity of its erection. No anatomist, historian, ethnologist, antiquarian, nor savant of any stripe has been able to decide the people even to whom these bones once belonged. Were they native Saxons, or Romans, Danes, Normans, or what? Nobody has more than guessed. RAILWAY ACCIDENTS IN EUROPS.—Calculations, based upon the most authentic returns, have established that since the introduction of railways into France, there has been only one traveler killed outright in every 2,000,000 of passengers, and there has been only one traveler wounded in every 500,000 passengers. What was the ratio of such casualities in the good old times of slow traveling? Why, when the diligences were in use, there was, on an average of ten years, one killed of every 350,000 travelers by these vehicles, and one wounded in 30,000. It seems, also, that in France, where every care is taken to prevent timid dowagers, nervous rentiers, and fast young people getting into danger at stations, the results have been loss favorable than in Belgium, where one only has been killed in 9,000,000 of travelers, and one wounded in 2,000,000. Against railway accidents one ought to be able to assure his life and limbs at a very small figure in Germany.
